Londonium Press announces the publication of Lord Of Lambeth:
The Extraordinary Life And Times Of Donald A. Clifford

Donald Clifford is a former mental patient and lifelong alcoholic. After a remarkable life struggling against adversity in which he was detained several times under the Mental Health Act, sharing a ward with tragic child star Lena Zavaroni and the son of James Bond author Ian Fleming, becoming involved in numerous criminal scams, witnessing the murder of a girlfriend, saving the life of a distressed teenager, and jumping in the Thames, he elevated himself to the peerage, gatecrashed Downing Street, and spent a fortnight as an honoured guest of the Mayor of a Czech spa resort where he was lauded by the national media.

Clifford's life story is one of those proverbial tales you couldn't make up; you'll laugh until the tears run down your cheeks. Breezily written by the man himself and his research assistant, it is published by Londonium Press and distributed by InfoText Manuscripts at £5.99 post free. 154 pages. Illustrated.
