Subject: re phone call today

Hello,

this is the e-mail I received last year.

I would like an e-mail confirmation so I can put this on the site with the images.

thanks

Dear Alexander

Thank you for your e-mail.

You may transcribe and publish the text of written material from The National Archives without charge.

This transcription waiver does not cover the reproduction of direct images of a documents from The National Archives. Publication on an open non-commercial website costs a one-off fee of £40.00 + £7.00 VAT. This fee covers the publication of up to twenty images.

The image must be protected from download at high resolution. You can do this by watermarking, or by keeping the resolution to a level whereby the document is legible for information and research, but is not of sufficient quality for commercial publication.

If you wish to proceed, payment may be by VISA or MC or Amex (we supply an email link to our secure payment site).

Yours sincerely

Subject: publishing documents on the web

Dear Sir,

Some time between about 1993 and 1999 I copied some documents from the WO235 series. Last night I scanned four pages of these - from trial transcripts - and would like to publish them on the web.

On reading your revised terms it appears that there is no copyright in these; I am not sure if this is the case but all the copies have PRO document numbers on them.

This transcript has been published in full on-line but I would like to publish the originals for authenticity.

I would be grateful if you could confirm permission for the publication of these documents.

Thanks
A Baron
