

Four New Publications For Libertarians, Smokers' Rights Activists And Skeptics

Smoking And Something Else 23 pages. £1.50

According to the anti-smoking lobby, smoking causes just about every disease under the Sun. Here, Simon Wolff a distinguished toxicologist gives his opinion, one widely supported in the United States, that the lifestyle academics are leading us up the garden path. Although Professor Wolff does not dispute the fact that smoking causes lung cancer, he is of the opinion that without current levels of air pollution we would see very much lower rates of lung cancer. His arguments are impressive. This pamphlet also contains an analysis of Professor Doll's pronouncements and finds them totally unconvincing.

The Doll's House 18 pages. £1.50

This is an appraisal of the work of Professor Sir Richard Doll, with particular reference to his work on smoking and cancer. Originally commissioned for the Ecologist, this short study, which contains quotes and opinions from Simon Wolff, Hans Eysenck and Samuel Epstein, finds Doll's work leaves much to be desired. A separate pamphlet contains related correspondence and will be of interest to the more academically minded.

Victim Wanted! 23 pages. £1.50

A study of passive smoking by FOREST researcher Judith Hatton. Now in her 74th year and smoking like a chimney, Mrs Hatton mounts a vigorous attack on the passive smoking brigade.

Smokers' Writes: Four Short Stories By A Non-Smoker £1.99

These would be funny if the subject matter were not so serious. Includes two futuristic stories.
