

The Prince And The Whore (Part 2)

This is a short follow up video to The Prince And The Whore: the Prince being Prince Andrew; the whore being Virginia Giuffre, the former Virginia Roberts.

The whinings of Virginia Roberts have been covered extensively by the mainstream media on both sides of the Atlantic and in Australia, where she relocated after meeting her future husband. Coupled with what has been described as Andrew's car crash of an interview with Emily Maitlis, the Prince has seen his name dragged through the mud. Even the Queen is said to have been taken in by this hysteria. So what are the facts?

This is a man who served his country and actually saw action in the South Atlantic. He didn't have to, but it's a family tradition. Andrew is not a member of the idle rich, and has been active in many fields, including charitable work.

In 1996, he divorced his adulterous wife, so when Virginia Roberts claims to have had sex with him, he was a free agent. She was 17 at the time; in Florida where Roberts met Jeffrey Epstein, the age of consent is 18, but in the UK it is 16, so a man in his 40s who has consensual sex with a 17 year old is doing nothing illegal, indeed under some circumstances this might be something to boast about.

Roberts claims to have been trafficked by Epstein. No, she was not. Epstein didn't force her to fly to the UK. He didn't force her to party at an exclusive night club, as she claims. And he didn't force her to have sex with Prince Andrew.

If you haven't seen this photograph already, take a long, hard look at it. It shows a teenager having fun. This is no sex slave. This is party time. Afterwards, Epstein sent her to Thailand; he didn't force her to go, he sent her. It was while she was there she decided to leave his employment, probably dissatisfied with the lifestyle of a jet set whore. She didn't elope; she wasn't kept in chains or even monitored, she was sent there for a massage course. Nice work if you can get it, and most definitely not any kind of slavery. Now the money having long run out, and her boss being first behind bars and now dead, she has crawled out from under her rock to cash in, selling her non-story to a tabloid newspaper for $160,000. But at the end of the day, Roberts is still a whore, and by her own admission, a co-conspirator of Jeffrey Epstein rather than a victim. Again, here she is admitting as much out of her own mouth.

Which brings us back to Prince Andrew. He is guilty of two things: poor judgment, and showing misplaced loyalty to an old friend.

If you don't recognise this woman, she is the murderess Sally Challen. In August 2010, she bashed her estranged husband's head in with a hammer. This year, in what can only be described as a miscarriage of justice, she was released from prison and is being hailed as some kind of heroic figure. Jeffrey Epstein never murdered anyone, and Prince Andrew is being pilloried simply for associating with him. That was bad judgment for a royal, but we are all entitled to make mistakes, especially when they don't damage other people.

You may not support Prince Andrew. You may not even like the institution of royalty, but give this guy a break. Unlike Virginia Roberts, he didn't procure underage girls for his pal to sexually abuse.
