To The Editor Morning Star

May 7, 1997,

Dear Sir,

On Friday May 2 you published a small report of the recent court case in which I was cleared of making a threat to kill with intent and intimidation of a witness or potential witness. The quote you attribute to me is not quite accurate but will suffice, however, I doubt you are aware of the full circumstances of the case. The jury accepted that the so-called death threat was a figure of speech, such as that used by Prince Nazeem Hamed in February when he threatened to put his opponent in the graveyard; I drew this analogy in court.

The “threat” wasn't actually used against Rita Broadway but was, most unwisely, used in a deposition to a police officer in which I made a number of allegations against her, all of which have been ignored. The claim that she said I had stalked here is true, but the claim that I did stalk here is patently false. It was proved in court that this woman tried to entrap me on behalf of Gerry Gable, in the process of which she gave me certain information about her personal life, something which she obviously denied. Most of this information was only partially true, but the fact that she had undergone two abortions since 1986 and the fact that her premises are in her name and that she could get rid of her “partner” at any time are not pieces of information I could have gleaned from any other source. She claimed too that I had found out where she lived yet refused to give her address in court!

Robin Ramsay, the editor of the prestigious (left wing) magazine Lobster has now received some of the documents in this case, including the lengthy letter that Gerry Gable wrote to Rita Broadway in which he offers her information from his confidential mailing list about people drawing benefit and smears sundry anti-fascists as Nazis and anti-Semites.

Incidentally, although you refer to me as a “rightwinger”, I think this is a more fitting description of Gerry Gable. Under cross-examination this dedicated “anti-fascist” admitted candidly that he is in regular contact with about a hundred members of the British National Party. And that his “moles” inside far right “hate groups” use racial abuse because they would be suspicious if they went around saying “nice things” about “black people”.

Yours sincerely,
A Baron
