

Preamble

COME CLEAN, MR GABLE:

WAS BLACK TEENAGER

STEPHEN LAWRENCE

MURDERED

BY A

"SEARCHLIGHT" MOLE?

"Blacks out!"

"Look at that filthy Nazi; ban the BNP!"

Preamble

When the Labour Government of Tony Blair was elected in May 1997, one of the first things it did was to keep a promise made while in opposition to an ad hoc group of campaigners based in South East London.

In April 1993, 18 year old teenager Stephen Lawrence was stabbed to death while waiting for a bus in Eltham. It was a totally unprovoked and equally a totally senseless killing. Because the victim was black there was immediate suspicion of a racial motive, although this is not necessarily the case. The fact is that we live in an increasingly violent society; contrary to popular belief, young men are more frequently the victims of gratuitous violence than generally more vulnerable groups such as women and pensioners, and black faces are not exactly uncommon in London nowadays. It may have been that the unfortunate victim was simply in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Be that as it may, five young men, who might rightly be described as louts, were charged with the murder, but the case and later a private prosecution brought by the Lawrence family collapsed. The police came in for widespread criticism in the wake of an apparently bungled investigation. There was talk not only of racism but of police corruption. The five accused, first by the police and later by the Daily Mail newspaper, were Luke Knight, David Norris, brothers Neil and Jamie Acourt, and Gary Dobson.

In October 1993, a riot ensued in Welling, South London when "anti-racist" protesters - in reality the usual ragbag left-wing mob - hijacked the Lawrence campaign and used it as a pretext for attempting to close down the headquarters of the British National Party. The riot was disgraceful and was clearly organised to some degree. Simultaneously, a march organised in Central London by black journalist Marc Wadsworth and his Anti-Racist Alliance passed off peacefully and without incident. Curiously, this peaceful march was scorned by the hard core "anti-racist" left, not least by Gerry Gable and his clique of mostly - but not exclusively - kosher shit-stirrers at Searchlight Magazine Limited.

Although he is a very plausible character, talking fluently to the media and even lecturing to students, occasionally the mask slips, and when it does, the face of hatred exposed is extremely revealing. This insidious, whining creep who looks like a caricature from Julius Streicher's hate sheet Der Stürmer, has been a major player in "anti-fascist" and "anti-racist" politics in Britain since 1974, and a bit player since at least 1963. Gable has an intense, fanatical hatred of the British National Party and all white nationalist/separatist organisations and their members. His hatred even extends to black separatists, and over the years he and his hate sheet have done their best to demonise the charismatic Louis Farrakhan and his Nation of Islam, Colonel Qathafi, and anyone else of any race - bar one - who doesn't share his pseudo-idealist vision of racial nirvana. Gable really is the lowest of the low.

None of the men accused of (and still widely believed to be responsible for) the murder of Stephen Lawrence had any connection with the British National Party or with any other far right organisation. This though hasn't stopped Gable and his gang from continuing to use this undeniable human tragedy as a big club with which to batter the BNP and its fellow travellers over the head. But could our courageous Jewish "anti-fascist" have an ulterior motive? Could it be that all the noise he and his gang make about the BNP is a case of a guilty conscience protesting too much?

In the New Year of 1998, Paul David (Charlie) Sargent of the "neo-Nazi" outfit Combat 18 was gaoled for life for the February 1997 murder of fellow traveller Chris Castle. Previously, Gable's hate sheet had built up Combat 18 as some sort of nascent right wing IRA claiming variously that it was controlled by "Nazis" then by the "Secret State" then by both! However, in the February 1994 issue of Searchlight it was candidly admitted that BNP Führer John Tyndall - a man Gable would have the world believe is the spiritual heir of Adolf Hitler - had proscribed Combat 18 because of its gratuitous street violence as much as its continued sniping at BNP members.

It is widely believed in right wing circles that Combat 18 was indeed a Secret State operation. Whether or not this was the case, and whether or not Gable is working for MI5 as conspiracy crank Larry O'Hara is forever warning his fellow left wingers, Gable and his gang have a long track record of inciting hatred and violence as part of their ongoing black propaganda operation and racial holy war against the wicked Aryan goyim. Could it be that far from being indignant over the senseless murder of Stephen Lawrence and holding the "Nazi" BNP to blame, Gable is secretly shitting himself because one of his agents provocateurs was responsible rather than the five accused or any genuine supporter of white racial-nationalism? Let us take a long, cool look at the similar fact evidence which indicates that this may indeed be so.

"Moles" Galore

"...the simplest and most effective of all 'black' operations is to spit in a man's soup and cry 'Heil Hitler!'" - Sefton Delmer, anti-Nazi propagandist.

Since the mid-70s, Searchlight, then under the control of Gable's co-racialist and fellow traveller Morris Ludmer, has run three accredited "moles" in far right "hate groups". These were Richard David (Dave) Roberts, Ray Hill, and Tim Hepple.

Roberts was ditched by Gable shortly after the death of Morris Ludmer in 1981. Roberts himself died the following year. (1)

During the 80s, Searchlight and Gable's star catch was Ray Hill, a former member of Colin Jordan's British Movement who had also been stirring up racial hatred in South Africa.

The third accredited "mole" was active during the 90s; Tim Hepple, a much younger man than Hill, was clearly mentally unbalanced and had boasted of working for MI5. At the time of writing he is active in the UFO movement, no doubt peddling crazy conspiracy theories along the lines of the American cult TV series The X-Files. (2)

The Searchlight Organisation has undoubtedly run many other "moles" inside the far right; two of them, although not accredited, can be named here. Leslie Wooler was active in the not-so-far-right and was a Searchlight "mole" before the magazine was founded. Charles Hanson was another "mole"; he is currently serving a life sentence for murdering his wife.

We should mention en passant Mrs Gable - or perhaps we should say the current Mrs Gable; randy Gerry has been married four times! In the late seventies the then Sonia Hochfelder was active in a number of far right organisations. Since her association with what Gable and his gang call the politics of hate became known, the Gables have claimed that she too was a "mole". This is a total fiction. (3)

Dave Roberts - A Real Swinger

The article Marshalling the forces reproduced here, top of page 3 appeared in the August 1975 issue of Searchlight.

The remark attributed to Marshall about blacks swinging through the trees to their hearts' content can only be construed as racially abusive, and would have even then, a decade and a half before the advent of "political correctness". One can search in vein through Spearhead, the theoretical journal of the British National Party, (4) or through the somewhat more militant British Nationalist, without finding any such racial abuse. Curious then is it not that these words were uttered by a committed "anti-racist"? For Ralph Marshall was actually the pseudonym of Dave Roberts.

The following year Roberts stood trial at Birmingham Crown Court along with two of the local right wing lunatic fringe, and was convicted of conspiring to assault the staff of an Indian restaurant!

Marshalling the forces

Ralph Steven Marshall appears to be one of the National Front's latest recruits to their campaign to infiltrate and influence the Trade Unions. Marshall, who is also known as John Green, although young, appears to have a fairly long record of Anti-Union and Anti-Socialist activity. He is known to be hyper-cautious and very secretive, and has moved around the Country several times in recent years causing trouble everywhere he has come to rest.

Presently one of the key men in the Pro-Tyndall camp in the Midlands, is at present using his skills to assist Tyndall in his fight with the Populists.

The areas that Marshall is known to have operated in, in the past, include Ealing, West London, Luton, Bletchley, and more recently the Midlands. A man who rarely lowers his guard, he did allow his thoughts to become crystal clear to a number of Racists at a meeting in East Anglia a couple of years ago when he declared " WE have more than our fair share of Blacks in the urban Industrial areas, now if we had enough tree's they could swing on them to their hearts content."

We think Trade Unionists should be alert to this man, and we hope to reveal more about him in future issues of SEARCHLIGHT.

Because I had no 'political' pretext for travelling to Paris I told him that my wife and I were taking a few days holiday while I recovered from the hectic campaign I had conducted as a British National Party candidate during the May General Election. It was more of a social visit, I told him, but I did not want to miss the opportunity for us to get together again. This meeting, unfortunately, was to produce little hard evidence of FNE's terrorist activities. Frederiksen refused to be drawn whenever I tried to open up the subject by declaring that the ballot box approach to national salvation was doomed, and when I announced that 'Bologna' was the way forward. He merely grunted vague assent and stared at the floor, giving the impression of a man who now regarded such talk as highly dangerous, even in the most select of right-wing company. It was all in very marked contrast to his behaviour during my previous visit. The evidence we

For an instant I thought I had been tumbled and that the music was intended to drown out anything the transmitter might hear. I was much relieved when Yann re-appeared and insisted that I should stay a couple of days with them. I explained that I was on a short holiday with my wife to rest up after the election campaign.

'Was the election good for you?' he asked.

'So so. I got 500 votes. But votes are no good. Elections are no good. Boom . . .' I did a passable impression of an explosion in an effort to draw him out.

'Yeah,' he laughed, 'fucking democracy . . .'

I seized the opening. 'Have you still got the M16?' On my last visit he had told me that it was his favourite weapon.

'Oh, yeah. It is always good to buy guns. Look - this is a .44 Magnum.' With that, he pulled a gun from beneath an armchair. It was followed by a Luger and another Magnum.

'Beautiful,' I said. 'How much?'

'2,000 francs.'

'Not much, can you get them into England?'

'Yes, but it would be difficult.'

'What about a machine pistol?'

'More difficult - but better too.'

Roberts made all manner of claims about Nazi conspiracies subverting the armed forces and the like, but none of these led anywhere; at the end of the day the only thing that was established for certain is that Searchlight "mole" Roberts had been engaged in activity unbecoming for a committed "anti-racist" as well as using the language of the gutter about his black fellow workers. (5)

Now it is not too far from conspiring to assault people to conspiring to do them more serious damage, or perhaps inciting a few pissheads to attack a totally innocent and innocuous young man waiting at a bus stop. When Roberts and his "Nazi" friends were arrested in the vicinity of the Bombay restaurant they were well tanked up. If the police hadn't been readily to hand who's to say that some poor Indian waiter or curry chef might not have suffered the same fate as Stephen Lawrence nearly two decades later?

Ray Hill - Black-hater, Indian-hater and Jew-hater

"Some do this in perfect good faith and honesty, and thus unconsciously help the enemies of their cause. Others, no doubt, as the struggle develops, will actually be employed, often unknowingly, by those very clever people, the big Jews, to make wild and foolish attacks upon Jews in general, in order to discredit anti-Semitism." - Sir Oswald Mosley writing in the Blackshirt, October 3, 1936, warning against violent anti-Semitic propagandists.

If anything can be said in favour of Dave Roberts it is that he was a misguided idealist, a dedicated Communist who believed that the means justified the ends, even if those means included inciting the racial hatred which he and his ilk would have the world believe they despise with every fibre of their beings.

The same cannot be said for Roberts' then handlers, and the same most definitely cannot be said for his successor. Ray Hill was no manner of idealist. He was a man who was attracted towards racial-nationalism for all the wrong reasons, and after a brief flirtation with an anti-immigration pressure group in Leicester in the late sixties he became a hard line "Nazi". (6)

Hill is both a convicted anti-Semitic thug and a self-confessed synagogue desecrator; both these acts were carried out while he was a Nazi. However, Hill claims to have turned over a new leaf while living in South Africa, but his activities since then were just as despicable, and potentially far more dangerous.

In his highly fanciful autobiography The Other Face Of Terror, (7) Hill relates how he almost single-handedly thwarted a plot to bomb the Notting Hill Carnival. This story has been related in the mainstream media as well as Searchlight magazine, although Hill and his handlers conveniently forget to mention that Hill incited this "plot" in the first place.

That being said, Hill does make some telling admissions in his book, particularly on pages 261 and 270 (see bottom of page 3).

The first quote is a reference to the Bologna Station bombing of August 2, 1980. This atrocity left over eighty people dead and injured two hundred. At the time there was much talk of this being a "fascist" outrage, although the involvement of "fascists" and the motivation for the bombing have never been established. (8)

Although he never adduces any meaningful evidence in support of this claim - for the obvious reason - Hill not only tries to implicate the French National Front in this bombing but reports that he suggested to one of this organisation's leaders that the massacre was a good idea!

While on page 270, Hill boasts to another right wing extremist, Yann Tran Long, (9) "I got 500 votes. But votes are no good. Elections are no good. Boom..."

He then did "a passable impression of an explosion in an effort to draw him out."

This is an extraordinarily candid admission for Hill to make. In other words, let's bomb the bastards; we can't take power through the ballot box, so we'll blow them to smithereens. "Boom!"

Hill's obvious contempt for the democratic process and his advocacy of terrorism - as a means of combatting hatred, prejudice and intolerance, no less - are equalled only by his equally obvious contempt for blacks. In the June 1992 issue of Gable's hate sheet Hill referred to Black Separatists as "a Gucci-outfitted bunch of middle-class wankers". (10)

Tim Hepple - Mentally Deranged "Nazi"

We won't waste too much time on Tim Hepple, whose eclectic meanderings in both the far right and the loony left have been documented adequately by conspiracy crank Larry O'Hara. (11) It goes without saying though that a man who boasts of stealing funds from the British National Party while working at its Welling "bunker", and who joins an American freak show which refers to non-whites as "mud people" deserves to be treated with overt suspicion. But the Church of the Creator connection is very interesting because this is an organisation which makes no attempt whatsoever to court respectability; only the most marginal of cranks would be genuinely attracted to its ideology, so there can be no bona fide reason for any of Gable's "agents" to join it. (12)

Curiously, Hepple was actively stirring shit in the far right and the far left shortly before the murder of Stephen Lawrence. Could it be that the latter was in fact targeted as a direct result of Hepple's machinations?

Gable's Other Moles

The Independent Magazine for February 22, 1997, carried a lengthy article by one of Gable's media poodles depicting him as some sort of hero debriefing one of his equally heroic agents in a Soho café who was on some sort of dangerous mission, presumably to prevent World War III. (13) The September 1995 issue of Gable's hate sheet claimed to have had half a dozen moles present at a recent BNP meeting; Gable later admitted to the current writer in civil proceedings that he had paid these people! And later still he admitted that his "moles" use racial abuse because if they went around saying nice things about black people "they'd stick out like a sore thumb". What a piece of guano.

Profiting From Hate

Gable doesn't reveal how much he pays these "moles" but the reader is entitled to ask where does all the money go? If Gable's unnamed "moles" are of the same quality as the Searchlight Organisation's three accredited moles, there can be little doubt that some of this money if not all of it is used for nefarious purposes. Perhaps even for buying a few rounds for aspiring boot boys in a public house in South East London?

We may not know where the money goes, but we do know where it comes from. One place it most certainly doesn't come from is from sales of Gable's hate sheet. Chesterfield accountant Morris Riley has examined the accounts of Searchlight Magazine Limited and reports that it has "negative equity". In layman's terms it makes a loss. So the magazine and Gable's other hatemongering is subsidised.

In 1996 it was revealed that Gable's post as head honcho of Searchlight Information Services [sic] is funded by the London Boroughs Grants Unit. (14) Another arm of the Searchlight octopus is the Searchlight Educational Trust, which is, incredibly, a registered charity, and is funded by charitable donations. This organisation's charitable status would appear to be dubious at best, but such has been the hysteria generated by the unholy crusade against racism that almost anything goes. Even some self-styled "anti-racists" are beginning to realise this. Writing in his massive 1995 study of American race relations, Indian immigrant Dinesh D'Souza comments that, public perceptions to the contrary, racism is much less widespread nowadays than at any time in the past, and that "where racism does not exist, sometimes it has to be invented". (15)

D'Souza attributes the contemporary obsession with racism to empire-building by the "anti-racist" bureaucracy, which is partly true, but in Gerry Gable's case at least there is another, and far more sinister, reason. Gable is eaten up with hatred for the society he holds responsible for the historic persecution of his own race, Final Solution, gas chambers and all. And, like the depraved, hatemongering goy-hater he is, he will do anything to demonise that society, including inciting hatred against blacks, other non-whites, and even Jews.

Ray Hill, one-time "Nazi" big mouth, is one of Gable's closest friends and is welcomed by Gable as an honoured guest in his house in spite of Hill's track record as both a race agitator and an anti-Semitic thug. (16)

Gable and Hill have both profited from hate, and both continue to do so. Eighteen year old Stephen Lawrence may have been murdered simply because he was black, but whether or not this was the case, "anti-racists" should pay less attention to the activities of the diminutive British National Party, and should instead shine a searchlight on the cancer in their own midst: Gerry Gable and his evil empire of agents provocateurs who have undoubtedly done more to perpetuate real racial hatred than any "Nazi" organisation operating in Britain today.

Although one need not take his ravings about Gable and the "Secret State" seriously, O'Hara's revelations about Hepple's activities were acutely embarrassing to Gable's hate sheet, and have undoubtedly contributed to the rift between these kosher hatemongers and the "anti-fascist" left.
