

Breast Ironing In The UK

By Alexander Baron - Sep 22, 2015

Not everything about the left's obsession with diversity is bad – chicken jalfrezi is a good example – but there are some things that even feminists won't tolerate in their lunatic quest for equality. One of these is female genital mutilation, an obscene practice that reared its ugly head here decades ago, although the first prosecutions were announced only last year.

Most Westerners won't realise that FMG has a cousin, one that is just as ugly. In London recently, a group of young women were handing out copies of a leaflet highlighting its alleged practice here. The rationale behind it is similar to the feminist mantra "Teach men not to rape" except it places the onus on girls as young as 10 not to incite men to rape by growing breasts prematurely. In Cameroon which is the major practitioner, the age of consent is 16, so what is the problem? We have a word for men who have sex with underage girls, regardless of whether or not they consent.

Although to date there have been no prosecutions here, there appears to be a consensus that there have been cases. If you want to see what it looks like, there are plenty of videos available on YouTube. Be warned, even the ones that are all talk are graphic.

BREAST IRONING

Breast ironing (also known as breast flattening) is the pounding and massaging of a pubescent girl's breasts, using hard or heated objects, to try to make them stop developing or to disappear. It is typically carried out by the girl's mother who will say she is trying to protect the girl from sexual harassment and rape, to prevent early pregnancy that would tarnish the family name, or to allow the girl to pursue education rather than be forced into early marriage. It is mostly practiced in parts of Cameroon, where boys and men may think that girls whose breasts have begun to grow are ready for sex. There are also fears that it has spread to the Cameroonian diaspora, for example to that in Britain. The most widely used implement for breast ironing is a wooden pestle normally used for pounding tubers. Other tools used include leaves, bananas, coconut shells, grinding stones, ladles, spatulas, and hammers heated over coals.