

The Tragedy Of Sabine McNeill

Recently, ludicrous but dangerous allegations of Satanic abuse reared their head in Hampstead, North London. The whole story behind these sick fantasies is now a matter of public record for those who believe in reason, logic, rational argument and common sense rather than some grand conspiracy of paedophiles that controls the local authority, the police, the Government, indeed the entire UK Establishment.

The shocking truth is that there is indeed a horror story here, one that involves the systematic abuse of two young siblings, but this abuse – which was not sexual in nature – was carried out by their mother and her lover in a campaign of vilification directed against the father of the boy and girl concerned.

In a rare move, the full judgment of the Family Court has been published. At the end of its 165 paragraphs, Mrs Justice Pauffley concludes: “There was no satanic or other cult at which babies were murdered and children were sexually abused.”

“All of the material...now published on the internet is nothing other than utter nonsense.”

“The children’s false stories came about as the result of relentless emotional and psychological pressure as well as significant physical abuse. Torture is the most accurate way to describe what was done... ”

“The long term emotional and psychological harm of what was done to the children is incalculable.”

Although the young boy and girl concerned have not been named in the judgment, their identities are a matter of record, the videos showing them reciting lurid tales of babies being murdered having been viewed millions of times, in spite of the efforts of the authorities to have them removed – something that is referred to as a cover up.

On April 20, a lengthy interview with the father was uploaded to YouTube by the BBC:

Any reasonably intelligent person who watches this interview, reads the judgment, and compares these with what the boy and his sister say, cannot but conclude that the whole business is a wicked fraud. Or so you might hope. Unfortunately, there is one highly intelligent woman who believes otherwise. Sabine McNeill has long been active in the financial reform movement. I met her many times from the last Millennium at CCMJ and related meetings including at the Palace of Westminster where she was a passionate advocate. She is both a mathematician and a software designer, fields in which few women excel. Unfortunately, in spite of her background and stratospheric IQ she has exhibited a gullibility that even your village idiot would find amusing, something that is far from uncommon in these circles: Judy Wood, David Ray Griffin and Webster Tarpley – all American academics – have likewise endorsed bizarre beliefs relating to the 9/11 attacks. In the UK we have our own Messiah in the form of David Icke. These are people who go far beyond the evidence, see conspirators or Satanists under every bed, and who will believe anything of any government provided it is sufficiently terrible without the slightest recognition that there are a lot of other liars out there (and kooks) besides those on the government payroll.

Sabine has done much and is still doing much to promote this “Whistleblower Kids” nonsense. In this endeavour she has been aided by two women who are if not mad then are not quite sane: Neelu Berry and Belinda McKenzie. When Berry was arrested recently, her address was given as Clayhall, Ilford, the home of another renowned conspiracy crank (and his wife) although even they wouldn’t touch this sort of thing with a bargepole. Belinda McKenzie is a wealthy woman who uses her wealth to promote all manner of mystical garbage. She has been a major player in promoting another bizarre story about child abuse, the Holly Greig hoax, which has seen the legal authorities in Scotland clamp down hard on this sort of scandal-mongering.

In the UK, any reporting of a legal nature involving the young is subject to severe restrictions; usually their names will not be disclosed unless they are impossible to keep secret as in the notorious case of Thompson and Venables. Such restrictions may be over-sensitive at times, but in this case they were clearly warranted. Sabine decided she knew better than the law, and broadcast this nonsense to the world. Now she finds herself in contempt of court, and has fled the country. Sadly, this is not the first time she has done something like this. There are undoubtedly many things wrong with the justice system in this country, including the semi-secret nature of the way proceedings involving family affairs are decided, but there is a right way and a wrong way to tackle this; Sabine has clearly chosen the wrong way.

It is a tragedy that she doesn't apply her considerable intelligence to see what is actually going on. If babies were (are?) being abused, murdered, even sacrificed in Hampstead on the scale claimed here, where is the evidence, the bodies, the missing kids, the witnesses? More to the point, if dozens or even hundreds of people are involved, and some of these people are extremely powerful in both local and national government, including the police, how were you able to slip out of the country unnoticed instead of being made to quietly disappear? Could it be this vast network of paedophile Satanists and cult killers exists only in the imaginations of demented women like...?

One person who should probably be relieved rather than angry that allegations of this nature and on this scale were made is Ricky...the father of the boy and girl concerned. Had they been coached to claim that he had simply indecently assaulted them, he could have found himself in serious trouble in view of the “believe the victim” culture that now permeates any claim of sexual harassment, much less rape or child abuse in the UK.
