

The page originally at this link has been deleted. On April 30, 2020 it was replaced with this one.

Video: Why we need the Domestic Violence Survivors Justice Act

https://dvsja.org/multimedia/video-why-we-need-the-domestic-violence-survivors-justice-act/index.html

CANY

Why we need the Domestic Violence Survivors Justice Act

Watch later Share

90% of women in prison are survivors of abuse. The DVSJA campaign is part of the ' advocacy campaign to change the way the criminal justice system responds to survivors of abuse who are convicted of crimes directly related to the abuse they suffered. The Coalition's Violence Against Women Committee carries out this campaign and works to raise public awareness about the devastating connection between abuse and women's .

Domestic violence victims in NY prisons may get some relief

Thu, Jan 1st, 2015

Valerie Seeley has been behind bars since 2003. But... more »

"Trapped in the dark": Marissa Alexander and how our twisted legal system re-victimizes domestic violence survivors

Sun, Mar 16th, 2014

He assaulted me, shoving, strangling and holding me... more »

Latest Blog Articles

June 1, 2012

Watch Kim Dadou, Tamar Kraft-Stolar and Kathryn Williams testify at the Women's Forum on Domestic Violence